In 26 patients, in whom the diagnosis of cerebral thrombosis or thrombosis was established by angiography, the investigations were performed to objectivate the effect of the anticoagulant therapy. The cardiovascular echocardiography (echocard) was used for the purpose. In most cases the thrombus was found only in the carotid artery, in some cases in the vertebral and intracranial arteries. These thrombi occluded only the intracranial arteries. The thrombi were found in the old patients, in which the risk of rethrombosis was high. The echocard investigation showed the correlation of the velocity of the blood flow in the carotid artery to the therapeutic efficacy of the anticoagulant therapy. The reliability of the results is limited by the low reliability of angiography. The realization of the tests is highly time consuming.
